Activities

- Raid your kitchen! Pretend to be a mouse, and look for sample foods that are “crisp and white,” “tasty and orange,” “sweet and yellow,” “tender and green,” “shiny and red,” and so on. As you go on, use other adjectives and combinations that were not used in the book.
- Play a guessing game with your child that starts with, “I am eating something that is ...” (use at least two adjectives to describe the item).
- During mealtime, describe the food items that are being served on the family dining table.
